

The Rules of Amateur Status:

A Brief Guide for “Low Handicap” Golfers

An official publication of R&A Rules Limited

Introduction

For golfers in the “low handicap” category their greater skill raises their profile and increases the potential for problems with the Amateur Code. A number of the Rules of Amateur Status apply only to players with “golf skill or reputation”. A player is considered to have golf skill if he has had competitive success at a local or national level, he has gained representative honours at county or national level, or if he competes at an elite level, but it is a matter for the Governing Body to decide whether a particular amateur golfer has “golf skill or reputation”.

The following lists are intended to provide the briefest of guides in order to prevent an inadvertent breach of the Rules of Amateur Status.

It should be noted that some of the following prohibitions apply to all amateur golfers irrespective of ability and that there are certain exceptions to these guidelines which apply to events exclusively limited to junior golfers.

Application for Reinstatement

If a professional golfer wishes to be reinstated as an amateur golfer, he must complete an application for reinstatement and undergo a period awaiting reinstatement. Generally, the period awaiting reinstatement starts from the date of the player's last breach of the Rules.

Guidelines on periods awaiting reinstatement are contained in Rule 9-2b(i) of the Rules of Amateur Status, but normally no applicant is eligible for reinstatement until he has conducted himself in accordance with the Rules for at least one year.

Conclusion

It must be stressed that these guidelines do not cover all aspects of the Rules of Amateur Status.

Where any doubt arises concerning a proposed course of action, the Governing Body of the Rules of Amateur Status in the player's own country should be consulted.
